

MASTER of SCIENCE

FAMILY STUDIES

with a specialization in Christian Counseling

Program Overview

The Master of Science in Family Studies is an interdisciplinary degree offered on campus and online, emphasizing family life education. The mission of the Master of Science in Family Studies program is to offer students a multidisciplinary degree program utilizing curriculum from counseling and human behavior and development to prepare students for employment in settings such as social service agencies, religious institutions, parent education programs, juvenile services, day care facilities, foster care programs, and retirement and/or assisted living facilities. Graduates will provide prevention, enrichment, and education on the family and its interaction with other social systems in a wide range of organizations. The degree has a specialization in Christian Counseling.

This program does not lead to licensure as a Licensed Professional Counselor. Students seeking a program with the academic requirements for L.P.C. licensure in the State of Texas should select the Master of Arts in Professional Counseling.*
